THE COVER LETTER: A PERSONAL INTRODUCTION

A cover letter is an important employment application document that should accompany your résumé. Research has indicated that cover letters are just as important as résumés when applicants are making initial contact. The cover letter allows you to personalize your application documents in response to advertisements or to inquire about possible positions within a company. The cover letter gives you an opportunity to express your personality, demonstrate your communications skills and organizational ability, and express enthusiasm for the company and the position.

The cover letter should be brief (generally kept to only one page), highlight your qualifications, and draw attention to specific points in your résumé. While résumés can only tell employers what you have done, cover letters allow for more elaboration and detail such as why you became involved in particular activities, what you gained from the experience, and why the employer should consider you for the position. A well-written cover letter commands the reader's attention; it creates interest in you and your résumé.

It is best if you can find out who is responsible for hiring and direct the letter to that individual. Cover letters should always be tailored to each specific company and position for which you are applying. If it is not possible to know who to direct the letter to, address it to the Human Resource Specialist, Human Resource Manager or Recruiter.

GENERAL GUIDELINES

A cover letter should be in paragraph form (save bulleted lists for your résumé) with a conversational, professional tone.		Keep your cover letter to one page but do not use a typeface that is too small and difficult to read in order to keep your letter to one page.
A cover letter should demonstrate your interest in the company and why you should be considered for the position.		Write short, brief paragraphs.
		Address the letter to a particular person by name. Avoid "To whom it may concern" by calling the paper.		Research the company prior to sending your résumé and cover letter.

Use terminology specific to your field.
Use good grammar and make sure you have no spelling or typing errors.		Be sure you have the correct spelling of names. If necessary, call to verify the correct spelling of the name and other details before you send the letter.

ORGANIZATION OF A COVER LETTER

- 1. Introduction Take time to think of an interesting first sentence. Avoid over-used first sentences such as "This is in answer to your advertisement," or "I am graduating from Santa Rosa Junior College." Reference any personal contacts (after securing their permission) you have in the company. It is also valuable to state the reasons for your interest in that particular employer. At the end of the first paragraph, make a statement that says you are a strong candidate because of your qualifications. This will lead the reader to the second paragraph. The first paragraph is always short.
- 2. Second paragraph Draw attention to your résumé. Explain how your qualifications (your skills, education and experience) match the employer's requirements. Be as specific as possible. Identify relevant qualifications and accomplishments that may uniquely qualify you for the position. Highlight and draw attention to points in your résumé, summarizing relevant information.
- 3. Third paragraph Request an interview. State where and when you can be reached. Indicate that you will call the employer if you do not hear from them.
- 4. Fourth paragraph Closing statement. Thank the reader for his or her time and consideration.

"The purpose of the cover letter is to turn your resume message into an individualized communication, explaining the particular way that you could benefit the needs of that employer"

Jack Moynier Marketing Manager 405 Guerneville Rd. Santa Rosa, CA 95403

Dear Mr. Moynier:

After reading an article about Fleur De Lys Winery in the North Bay Business Journal I became interested in possible employment with your company. I have always been impressed by your wine and wine labels and have some creative ideas that may benefit your marketing effort. I graduated with my Associate in Arts degree in Graphic Design from Santa Rosa Junior College in May. As part of my training I completed two semesters of internships at several wineries.

My enclosed resume provides details on my internships and employment. During my internship at "Cake bread Cellars" I was fortunate to work with a leading graphic designer for the wine industry who provided me with many new learning opportunities. I assisted him with introducing a new product line that generated $10,000.00 in sales during the first month. In addition to my education and training in graphic design I have a background in sales with a track record of consistently exceeding sales quotas.

I would appreciate an opportunity to discuss potential employment with your company and will call you next week to follow up. Should you wish to contact me, my home phone is: (707) 867-5309, or Cell (212) 479-7990 or my e-mail at charmian@gmail.com.
